GUIDE FOR USERS

SECTION TWO - TITLES

The following section shows all the titles listed in the Sessions Section in alphabetical order; as in the past, we regard the whole title as an entity without separating the words "a", "an", "the". With regard to the suites, all the titles which compose them are listed with a reference for each.

HEADING: comprises two lines of general information on the title.

- first line: after the title, the authors are listed: the composers first and then, separated by an oblique stroke, the lyricists. This is followed by the theme structure and the number of bars composing it: if the themes are more than one, they are marked with Roman numerals.
- second line: sometimes the record labels show longer titles than those mentioned by us: the words completing them are followed or preceded by a dash depending on whether they lie before or after the title. We also list possible alternative titles.

CONTENTS: the chronological list of the various performances is preceded by the catalogue number (corresponding to that of the Sessions Section); tunes from a Medley are marked with an asterisk. Next comes the description of the tune in abbreviated form. If the soloist's initials are followed by an instrument given in brackets, it means the soloist is playing an instrument other than his usual one; if the initials of two or three soloists are joined by a dash, it means they are playing in duo or trio. Those titles that do not have a musical content (Interwievs, etc.) are shown in minutes and seconds.

SECTION THREE - DISCS

HEADING: comprises two lines of general information on the record.

- first line: name of the recording company printed in full, number and country of manufacture.
- Second line: information on the size and speed of the record, if a vinyl pressing, the title (if given in square brackets it means there is no title on the label) and year of issue.

CONTENTS: the entries here refer to the titles included in the record, which are preceded by an alphanumerical reference mark or number indicating the respective side and track on the vinyl records and the track position on the CD's. Each title is followed by the catalogue number given in brackets, corresponding to that of the Sessions Section. The original releases are underlined.

A few records that are particularly complicated have been arranged in five columns.

- first column: side and track occupied on the record for each tune.
- second column: title printed on the label; an asterisk instead of the title means there is no title on the label.
- third column: correct title of the tune; "same" if identical.
- fourth column: the plus sign indicates it is a first release.
- fifth column: catalogue number of the tune.

All the above mentioned data refer to the label and not the sleeve, with the exception of CD's obviously.

The records mentioned represent a selection of all those released. Our list does not include 78 r.p.m. records. Among the others, we have comprised:

- all the records that include at least one unreleased title;

- all the records that are first releases of those manufactured exclusively for the U.S. Armed Forces, radio broadcasting stations, private individuals, etc.;
- all the first releases on CD of LP's;
- some records which we consider particularly important.

Owing to the lack of space, we have excluded the French Classics series "The Chronological Duke Ellington and his Orchestra" which provides, on CD, excellent evidence of Ellington's recordings up to 1945.

SECTION FOUR - MUSICIANS

HEADING: comprises two lines of general information of the musician.

- first line: gives the name, surname and nickname of the musician, followed by his dates of birth and death and the instruments played, the first being the main one.
- second line: the length of his stay with the band: first the dates when he joined and left, separated by a dash, and last any occasional performances.

CONTENTS: listed in alphabetical order, are the titles where a solo of at least eight bars has been performed; a catalogue number given in brackets refers to that particular version of the title.
